LICHFIELD, known as "Mother of the Midlands" is noted for its beautiful Cathedral and wealth of literary and historical associations. Twin Pools mirror the soaring spires of the Cathedral which are well referred to as the "Ladies of the Vale". It is the birthplace of Dr. Samuel Johnson, compiler of the first full length English Dictionary, whose house in the Market Square holds numerous exhibits of great interest to the visitor. Lichfield has been the home of many famous people—Elias Ashmole the Antiquary and Herald, Joseph Addison the Essayist, David Garrick the Actor and Erasmus Darwin the Scientist, to name a few. On the edge of the beautiful Stowe Pool is the Church and Well of S. Chad who settled here in 669 and became first Bishop of Lichfield.
